LAW ENFORCEMENT PARAMOUNT ISSUE

Washington, D. C., December 11.—Federal Prohibition Commissioner R. A. Haynes, Colonel L. G. Nutt, Acting Chief General Prohibition Agent and Judge James J. Britt, Counsel Prohibition Unit, returned Saturday from a week's survey of Southern States, where they met with directors, division chiefs and their agents, prominent officials and representative citizens in furtherance of a program for closer cooperation of all enforcement agencies. Delighted with the success of the trip, Commissioner Haynes issued the following statement:

"Conferences in which I have participated the past week with Governors, Federal Judges, United States Attorneys, United States Marshals, Mayors, Sheriffs, Chiefs of Police and other officials in several Southern States, together with Directors, Divisional Chiefs and various officers of the Prohibition Unit, having as the primary object closer cooperation of all enforcement agencies, as contemplated by the concurrent provision of the Eighteenth Amendment, proved inspirational and productive of practical help.

"I found in South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana and Florida a militant public sentiment in favor of prohibition law observance and constructive enforcement.

"The attitude of officials, who volunteered the fullest support, demonstrated that an aroused patriotic, Constitution-revering citizenship is asserting itself everywhere in the South, not unlike that in practically every section of the country.

"Oldtime illicit distilling in the South is succumbing to the vigorous, united attacks of the Federal, State and county officials, while the character of the product, made under most unsanitary conditions, is causing such a slump in demand that the problem is no longer difficult.

"The same may also be said in relation to coast line smuggling, which has been reduced by sub-chaser and motor boat control and general knowledge that most so-called smuggled liquor is not imported but doctored synthetic stuff fraudulently bottled and fraudulently labeled.

"With all bond liquor securely guarded in warehouses and scarcely any pure liquor coming from foreign shores, consumers are rapidly realizing that most available beverage liquor is unfit to drink, and this phase of the situation, together with concerted action all along the line, is making the Eighteenth Amendment a stern, enforceable actuality.

"The trip as a whole was eminently satisfactory. There were earnest proffers of cooperation by high officials everywhere. The reception of our party was warm and generous at all places, and well-known Southern hospitality was abundantly sustained."

Mr and Mrs J. V. Travis were advised Sunday morning of the sudden death of their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Amelia Travis, wife of Sargeant R. B. Travis, at a sanatorium in Massachusetts. Sargeant Travis is stationed at Langley Field, Va.
